DECLASSIFIED

TUESDAY
OCTOBER 19, 1954

We were supposed to lunch today with Monsieur Cornu at the Grand Trianon together with various diplomats and Versailles officials. E. was too ill to go so we had to drop out. Instead, Lilian de Rothschild had a quiet lunch with us.

Mendès and Adenauer are meeting this afternoon to negotiate over economic arrangements between France and Germany, and also the Saar problem. This latter promises difficulties, for the Chancellor's following in his Parliament for a Saar solution will be more critical of his actions than regarding the London Agreement.
